EVACUATION ART

One of more 17 simple larger-than-life stick figure sculptures is unloaded in New Orleans, Monday, May 6, 2013. The statues will be used to call attention to evacuation pickup points around New Orleans for residents who need transportation out of town when a hurricane evacuation is ordered. The figures were designed by Boston artist Douglas Kornfeld, bottom center, who was selected for the work by the Arts Council of New Orleans. Helping unload are James Pellegrin and his son on the forklift James Pellegrin, Jr. The arts council is working with Evacuteer.org, an organization that coordinates volunteers who help with the massive evacuation effort that accompanies a hurricane threat.
